Robert Lepage will be directing Shakespeare's The Tempest in Wendake during the summer of 2011

Produced by Ex Machina and exclusively presented outdoors at the Wendake amphitheater

Quebec City, January 10, 2011 - Ex Machina, in collaboration with the Huron-Wendat Nation, announces that tickets for The Tempest, by William Shakespeare are now on sale. This new work by Robert Lepage will be presented at the Wendake amphitheater from July 1st to 30th. The amphitheater is part of an exceptional natural setting near the St. Charles River, 15 minutes from downtown Quebec City. The show will bring together native and non-native performers and will be presented for one month only. Since the play has not been created for touring purposes, the only opportunity to see it will be during the summer of 2011, in Wendake.

Individual tickets are on sale as of today on Billetech.

The show presented in French starts at 9:30 PM, Tuesday to Saturday from July 1st to 30th, as well as Sunday July 3rd and 10th.

Package deals including dinner and / or hotel nights are also available.

The Tempest

Prospero, former Duke of Milan, was deposed by his brother Antonio and banished with his daughter Miranda on an uncharted island. Drawing on the magic of his books, he commands the elements and mysterious creatures: Ariel, spirit of air, and Caliban, half-savage monster. Ariel leads Prospero's revenge by generating a storm that causes the sinking of Antonio's boat, the usurper and Alonso, the King of Naples. Stranded on the island, they undergo various punitive tests controlled by Prospero, and come out transformed.

The Tempest is often considered Shakespeare's will, one of his major works in which the central character, Prospero, embodies and summarizes the philosophy of the greatest playwright in history.
